HEAR Report from Superintendent

- Congratulated Mychal and Erick Kendricks for their fantastic job playing on opposing teams in Sunday’s NFC Championship game.
- The district is continuing to expand Career Technical Education opportunities for students. The Heavy Truck project will help modernize current CTE facilities on the Duncan campus as well as provide a state-of-the-art building dedicated to heavy truck maintenance and repair. Duncan will also expand current welding and manufacturing classrooms.
- Nelson had the opportunity to speak at several events celebration of Martin Luther King, Jr., whose words have laid the groundwork for many great civil rights leaders who followed, including Fred Korematsu. In 1942, when he was just 23 years old, Korematsu refused to go to the government’s incarceration camps for Japanese Americans during World War II. Korematsu appealed his arrest and conviction all the way to the Supreme Court with his case ultimately overturned after documents revealed Japanese Americans had not committed any acts of treason to justify their mass incarceration. Korematsu’s and Dr. King’s legacy continue to provide valuable civic lessons for our students. You can see students’ artwork as part of the McLane Art Venture project about the Japanese Interment on the second floor of the Education Center.
- Provided an update to the district’s African-American acceleration efforts. The district is currently collaborating with WestEd to develop a community task force and action plan for students. District leaders will meet with WestEd next week to discuss next steps and address the district’s and board’s initiatives and goals for students. Nelson stated that Fresno Unified is determined to increase the rate of achievement growth and outcomes for African American Children. On February 13, Fresno Unified will host its first Black College Expo at Fresno High School, drawing more than 25 of the country’s top black colleges and universities. Many schools will be accepting students for admission on the spot and providing financial scholarships.
